ICBC LOSES $4.4 MILLION

93rd YEAR, No. 66

VANCOUVER (CP) - The Insurance Corporation of Brit-ish Columbia lost $4.4 million last year on general insur-ance, exactly twice the loss it suffered the previous year, ICBC spokesman Bev Penhall

Penhall said in an interview that the losses are almost directly proportional to the cor-poration's increase in general insurance business. ICBC wrote $8.4 million worth of general insurance in the fiscal year ending February, 1975, compared to $15.4 million in the year ending February, 1976, he said.

Penhall's comments came after ICBC revealed Wednesday details of rate increases n its general insurance division. The boosts, which became effective Aug. 1, are intended to get ICBC operating on a break-even basis, the

The roll-back move is expected to allay some of the concerns recently expressed by Communities United for Action, a coalition of points. Action, a coalition of neighborhood associations, which has urged the city to take drastic action to curb the destruction of sound single-family housing stock.

Acting on recommendations from its Advisory Planning-Commission, council initi-ated downzoning procedures (which will involve plblic hearings) for scores of properties in two separate communities.

One is the general' area bounded by Hillside, Cook, Pembroke and Blanshard; the other involves three smaller pockets of housing in the Fairfield area.

The former represents only The former represents only the first stage in a massive rezoning program, which will implement the policies established in Victoria's Inner City Neighborhoods Study published six months ago.

Assistant planning director Peter, Crisp explained today that, although much of the that although much of the area south of Hillside and east of Blanshard has been goned for apartments for 20 years, it has generally re-mained untouched by develop-zoning remains, so too does the threat of block busting, with apartments likely to mushroom as islands in a sea of single-family homes. Under the present zoning umbrella, anyone who assembles two lots can put up a 14-suite apartment without any recourse to council.

The downzoning, Crisp said, is designed to ensure that the city regains its lost control over the use of the land. If any apartment development is allowed in future, it will be on the deliberate decision of city council and not the whim of a developer.

He stressed that there is no on blocks which have already been "eroded" to a certain

"But what we are really saying is that those large blocks (of single-family housing) which have not been in-truded upon by apartments should be sustanied in their present form and given, if you like, security of tenure." A similar objective of preserving good quality homes is behind the proposed Fairfield zoning changes, Crisp said. But there is a greater urgency because Fairfield is under pressure from developers, who find it a "desirable" area for apartments. "If we want to accomplish newal in the old, depressed areas of the city we will not do it by allowing developers freedom of movement in Fairfield. As long as we allow Fairfield to be eroded, the developers will opt for that.

Crystal Gardens: Referendum

torians and visitors of the old Crystal Gardens are happy and warm ones, and the city's attachment to the old place a dip, a dance or a dinner - a happy combination of activities that unhappily, in this age of over-specialization is hard to find.

Unfortunately, these days Crystal Gardens. The building today is a derelict and a mess painful to see. The glass roof which is its sole architectural dustinction (otherwise it's only a 51-year-old brick shed) is unsafe and lets in the elements. Destitute Children

Suffer little children to come unto Why not take these words from the good book in a personal sense. In Kerala state in India, destitute children are being helped by the Indo-American Club. To quote from the director:

'We have more than 100 destitute children now in the scheme. We have been able to find foster parents for them in different parts of UK and it is heart-warming to note the very keen interest the foster parents always take in the welfare of the less fortunate in the society; we have on file hundreds of names of destitute children needing assistance and we do not know where to turn for help.

For example, Shibu (our foster child) lives with the mother and two otherchildren in the small village of Chengan-nur. Shibu is now able to attend school, to have food and clothing (the fund is equally divided between the little forms.) divided between the children in the family to avoid feeling of jealousy and dis-crimination and to have hope for his own future life. - Somebody does care

Legion Replies

I am disappointed, sir, by the publicity given to recent irresponsible attacks made upon the membership of the Royal Canadian Legion in connection with reported ons at the Memorial Pavilion of Royal Jubilee Hospital.

In the first place, despite the number of beds allocated for the use of veterans, the hospital is no longer a veterans' hospital as such, since the decision was taken between the federal department of veterans affairs and the province of British Columbia to reduce it to its present

Certainly there was input from the legion at that time but very little press publicity or support of the legion's position at that time. As a consequence, despite a legion representative on the board, the legion has only a limited influence upon the operation of the hospital as it affects

Nothing could be further from the truth and I for one will not stand idly by while these poison pens

Full Employment

A Johnny-come-lately politician has dug up one of the oldest anti-labor cliches and is being hailed on all sides as the new siah. Labor's considerable gains in the last 80 years only came after long and ften bitter struggle. "There must be a better way" has been the cry of editors, politicians and Bible-punchers after every smashed picket line left injury and jail sentences to split communities for years to come, and even families divided. What was meant by "the better way" was for labor to accept meekly, and with humble thanks, the wages and conditions offered, and let their masters build castles in peace. No unionist in his right mind would attempt to strike with a large minority op posed, nor would he or she use the strike as a weapon lightly, knowing better than the critics its awful cost. However, it is that unionists are sheep led into confrontation at the whim of "leaders" who say "it's a nice day for a strike" and get a picket line immediately.

While I rejoice at labor's every gain, I regret that we have lost sight of our only real protection — "full employment" even in peace time. What labor's critics really want is to protect the right of the employer to discard the most productive worker on the welfare rolls whenever the export market does not suit his profit

When our youth demand full oppor tunity to work, whether the market suits or not, when Canadian workers cannot be told to put their families on rations until the market improves, when every able and willing person has a useful place in society, and houses are built for Canadians regardless of the U.S. or other markets, we won't need the strike.

Get your priorities right, Mr. Barber and I'll agree to outlaw the strike weapon 24 hours after full employment becomes dated then. - R.S.B.

Dole: Political Alley Fighter

KANSAS CITY - U.S. President Gerald Ford has chosen the most distinguished Republican vice-president nominee since William E. Miller in 1964 (Spiro T. Agnew being one of the official lican non-persons). In fact, the Dole-Miller parallel is striking and this mination may well produce about the Bob Dole! The mind boggles at the lack of inspiration required of Gerald Ford in making such a choice. Such embryonic respect for Ford's capacities as had been engendered by his plodding victory here over Ronald Reagan' razzle-dazzle attack disappeared like a plate of Arthur tack disappeared like a plate of Arthur Bryant's barbequed ribs in the moment of his vice-presidential announcement. Perhaps no amount of persuasion or proselytizing could have bagged Reagan as Ford's running mate, despite the fact that the two candidates divided the Republican convention virtually 50-50.

Reagan Draft Maybe?

Not everyone would agree that a Ford-Reagan ticket would have been a good one anyway - although to the extent Ford needs to carry California, Texas, and Florida, which is a considerable extent, Reagan would have been most useful.

But Ford had at least two alternatives, either of which could at one stroke have demolished his reputation as an un-imaginative and bumbling campaigner without a helmet. He could have named Anne Armstrong, his own ambassador to. Great Britain and a Texan with political clout, ample ability and international experience. That would have put Jimmy Carter at once and finally in the shade as an innovator, and opened the Republican party to new faces and new generations in way no one has done since Dwight

Failing that, Ford could have left the choice to the convention, again putting Carter in the position of having done the traditional political thing against Gerald Ford's openness and originality. The result probably would have been a Reagan draft, which would have given Reagan an honorable way to accept despite previous disclaimers and would have given Ford party unity as well as an exciting running mate. had excellent alternatives to the Dole ection — and without going too far left any but the most conservative

William D. Ruckelshaus of Indiana would have been a young, vigorous and able running mate, providing instant dis-association from Watergate. Senator Howard Baker, always a bridesmaid, has strength in the south that might have helped counter Carter in Tennessee, North Carolina, Virginia and Florida. Governors Robert Ray of Iowa or Christopher Bond of Missouri could have given a Ford ticket the youth, vigor and intelligence it needs, while offending practically no one

WILLIAM RUCKELSHAUS a better veep candidate

The choice of Dole — an un-listinguished senator from Kansas as Bill Miller was an undistinguished representative from New York — is reported to have assured the support of the Reagan

But at what a price! Dole does not even add regional balance to the Republican ticket. Both the single nominating ballot and the test vote on rule 16-C at this concentrated already in the midwest and the east. Carter, moreover, also has a midwestern running mate and one probably better versed in agricultural and grain trade matters than Dole.

Like Miller before him, Dole has no known record in foreign or domestic affairs that could be remotely termed presidential. Although not in the forefront Ford little help on the Watergate issue.

But Dole, a former Republican national Chairman like Miller, does bring to the Republican ticket exactly what Miller prought to the Caldwater exactly expenses in brought to the Goldwater campaign in 1964, a reputation as a tart-tongued political alley fighter. That suggests that Ford has engaged a running mate to take the low road with sharp attacks on the Carter-Mondale ticket and the bigspending "Democrat party," while the president himself pretends to be above the

Wheel-horse COPer

Dole may prove more effective in such a role than Miller, who spotted the in-evitable early in the fall of 1964 and contributed little to the Goldwater campaign thereafter. But the Dole selection also means a Republican ticket of two veteran Washington legislators, and thus throws away the anti-Washington issue. A politician to the bone, Dole deprives the Republicans of the anti-politician ploy,

In a year when the public seems interested above all in the personal character and trustworthiness of its leaders, the choice of Dole seems exceptionally jarring — based on immediate political considerations, without much regard for the presidential succession, un-likely to expand the horizons of a minority party, and apt to concentrate the cam-paign on personalities and partisanship. That choice unfortunately confirms, as well, what most of his presidency and all well, what most of his presidency and all of his campaign has suggested, that Gerald Ford is basically a wheel-horse Republican, so steeped in that breed's orthodoxies and so limited by its perceptions that he has no idea how to transcend them, or even that a president should.

Who Says British Feudalism is Dead?

By ROBERT B. SEMPLE

GREAT BIRCHAM, England — About two miles before Great Bircham, on the right hand side of the road leading to King's Lynn, lies Heath Farm. The farm holds 1,000 cattle and half as many sheep, but it is a curiously lifeless place, perhaps because life seems to have gone out of the people in the old stone

"Friends don't stop by very often," says Arthur Watterson, who until about a month ago did all the day-to-day chores. "When you're done like this, nobody speaks to you."

Watterson is a hulk of a man, built for farming, with broad shoulders and massive forearms. But today he is merely pathetic — beaten, bewildered, barely able to grasp, much less fight, the sudden shift in his for-tunes. All he knows, he says, is that he is the latest victim of Britain's semi-feudal system of "tied cottages."

Watterson lives in a tied cottage, so-called because he can live in it only as long as his farmer employs him. When he went into a hospital for an asthmatic condition in March, his employer - a Dane who lives nearby decided that Watterson was no longer fit to work the farm. So he ordered him off the job and out of the house that went with the job. Watterson has four weeks to find a new place.

The system of tied cottages is now a major political issue here. There are about 100,000 farm workers living in tied cottages, more than half the total workforce in Britain, and the Labor government wants to give them more security of tenure

A bill has passed the House of Commons, and is now under consideration in the House of Lords, that would protect a tenant farmer unless the owner could demonstrate in court that the tenant was no longer a useful employee and that he needed the house to attract an "essential" incoming worker. The local housing authority would then be obliged to use its "best efforts" to re-house the dis-

The left wing of the Labor Party says the bill is not strong enough, once a man is installed in a house he should remain in it. This is the main principle of the country's Rent Act — a powerful law covering most ordinary te-nants and making it virtually impossible for landlords to evict them. The farm owners, however, say the bill will involve them in endless litigation and weaken their ability to use tied cottages to attract the labor they

According to surveys, however, the farm worker himself is of two minds about the system. Arthur Watterson represents the unacceptable face of the system, a reminder of how it can be manipulated by a whimsical employer who, without justifying his actions, can toss a proud man and a wife and three children onto a housing market that is already overburdened.

Watterson's story is the arithmetic of despair. "Started when I was 14. Farmed 36 hill in a big Mercedes and tells me I have 28 days to leave. That's how you finish: down and out at 50.

But until he ran afoul of his employer there may have been a personality clash as well as "medical" reasons behind the dismissal — Watterson was also a beneficiary of the system. His weekly rent was less than $3, one-fifth the cost of good public housing. By law, British agricultural workers are paid $80 week, and overtime is plentiful in harvest and planting seasons.

Alfred John Spooner, who works down the road near Billingford, feels differently about the system. He would not take a city job if you offered him double the money

'I've been working here 40 years. I live in one of the tied cottages and my son in the other. We pays about one pound ($1.80) a week, and the farmers pays the maintenance and taxes. If you get sick, they mostly look after you well. If I don't want to work overtime I don't. I get along with the guv'ner and Spooner's 'guv'ner' is Michael Garrod, a lean well-educated 44-year-old who took the farm over from his father in the late 1940s, invested heavily in modern equipment, and raises hay, wheat and barley on 600 acres.

He is a member of the National Farmers Union, which has opposed the tied cottages bill, but he is hardly a fanatic on the subject. He thinks that reform is overdue, that men like Arthur Watterson have been unfairly treated and should have rights of appeal.

What disturbs him about the bill is a bit of technical wording that, he thinks, creates a loophole big enough to drive his own $30,000 combine harvester through.

The language says that even after a farmer can prove that he needs the cottage for a new tenant, the old tenant can remain until the local housing authority finds a vacancy. This could take a long time, especially if the local authority is lazy or has a long waiting list. Garrod wants the bill written to give displaced tenants priority.

Power Line 'Pollution'?

By PATRICK O'DONOVAN

The village of Fishpond may have lighted the way to the recognition of a new form of pollution in Britain. If it does so, it will have been the victim not the perpetrator of the pollution and a singularly charming one at that.

It is very small and scattered. It lies among the hills of Dorset not far from Bridport. Indeed it is so small and illdefined that it takes animal cunning to find it. Its only public building is a small whitewashed Methodist chapel, no shop, no pub. Otherwise it is just a scattering of pleasant houses along narrow lanes and a view of rich valleys and bare hills and a peace that not even hot can break dinary is the line of electricity pylons that stride across it, like great giants frozen in mid-stride. There is an awful sort of majesty about them, though it is a hideous and menacing majesty. They each carry six bunches of cable strung from porcelain insulators as big as a man. These, not used elsewhere on the line, are presumably to protect the village that lies beneath them. Each bunch of lines consists of four cables kept separate by being attached to the edge of round things that look like

Some people in the village insist they are the victims of electro-magnetic pollution. There have been small meetings about it and protests to the Central Electricity Generating Board. The board has not been impressed.

The sort of phenomenon com plained of occurs most in bad or misty weather. Then people near the wires complain, of course, that their television is unworkable. I was told that four sets had inexplicably exploded though I could find no one who had had this happen.

To find out, I called St. Peter. "Good morning, Pearly Gates Inc., just a moment please . . . sorry to keep you waiting, can I help you?"

"Yes, I'd like to speak to St. Peter." "Could I have your name, please?"

"Do you have an appointment?"

* * * "Why, no."

"Well, I'm afraid our president can't speak to you without an appointment. He is rather busy.

"President?"

"Yes, Heaven is now a limited company and St. Peter is president and chairman of the board. Could anyone else

The report, by the U.S.

The report, by the U.S. General Accounting Office, the congressional watchdog agency, said arrival of inappropriate, unsorted or unidentifiable supplies overtaxed Guatemalan logistical facilities following the earthquake.

It said investigators were told that only 30 per cent of the medicines received from abroad were usable. The rest were out of date, opened or unidentifiable. Food warehouses contained such items as raisin bran, canned sweet corn, yams and dies of beans, corn and rice.

and vague appeals made by donors and the Guatemalan government, said the report.

But the report added that n early detailed assessment and communication to donors of supplies needed could reduce the problem in future disasters.

"There should be only one voice communicating these needs and this is a function which we believe could be best performed by UNDRO," it added.

Island Rider Texan Fights Fire At PNE Show At B.C. Oil Well

FORT ST. JOHN (CP)— Fire officials were calling for special fire fighting equip-ment Wednesday to help com-bat a blaze burning out of control at an oil well 30 miles northwest of this Peace River community. community.

Jim Adair, son of Texas fire-fighter Red Adair, said equipment was to be sent from Whitecourt, Alta., to help fight the blazing rig. No injuries have been reported.

Although no details were available, it was expected that Adair would use the standard explosive technique pioneered by his father to extinguished the fire.

The blaze began early Wednesday after the well owned by Norcen Exploration Ltd of Calgary had sprung a leak Monday.

Employees of Hi-Tower Drilling of Fort St. John worst.

ing of Fort St. John were in the process of closing off the well in preparation for begin ning of production when the leak began. Adair was called in soon after.

The leak continued to blow gas without complication until the fire broke out. Cause of the ignition was not known.

Most equipment surrounding the site had been removed befdore the fire began, but aerial surveillance showed the drilling rig and the sump tanks (used in lubrication) were destroyed.

No damage estimate was available.

Residents of the area were in no immediate danger because the gas burning is sulphur-free and produces no poisonous fumes.

The current draft report defines the Burnside district as the northwestern corner of the city, bounded by Victoria har-bor, Saanich, Blanshard Street and downtown Victoria — an area of less than a square mile with a population of about 3,100 which is "one of the most important conce dustrial activity" in the city.

The study says that in add tion to the established major economic uses in this area, including the B.C. Forest Products mill on Selkirk Water and the B.C. Hyrdo depot on Douglas, there is the potential for a wide range of service, commercial and industrial activities.

It recommends the designa-tion of an "extensive area for general economic activity," to be protected by appropriate has ordered the city of Victoria and the Canadian Union of Public Employees to sign a zoning policies.

Julie's Money Likely to Go Into Trust

The $6,500 donated by thousands of people in Greater Victoria to help mend Julie Freeman's ailing heart will probably be held in a trust fund until doctors can perform

The 21-year-old Saanich girl and her parents arrived back from the Mayo clinic Wednesday night after doctors, there said their techniques are not sufficiently advanced for the needed surgery.

Surgeons hope to be able to undertake the operation in one or two years, the Freemans were told.

. Derrick Freeman said today the family was naturally disappointed but Julie's spirits remain high and they are determined to persevere. She is still "a bit woozy" from tests conducted at the Minnesota clinic, but after two weeks of vacation will return to her clerical job with the Greater Victoria school board

Julie's heart, which is on the wrong side of her body, has only two of four chambers and also has a faulty valve. The Freemans—were told that to undertake surgical repairs at this time would be to do so when chances of success are "50-50 or less."

Word of her plight attracted a wave of public sympathy earlier this month and a fund organized by the Open Heart Society of B.C. attracted about $6,500 in contribu-

The scientists who conducted the experiment said they were able to predict the life-span of laboratory animals accurately "solely on the basis of their dietary behavior and growth responses early in life."

M. H. Ross and E. Lust-

At the same time, they suggested the dietary prefer

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

At all levels of play, even the very highest, when an opponent opens the bidding with pre-emptive call of four spades, he makes it impossible for his adversaries to bid in scientific fashion. Such was the case in today's deal, which came up in the Na-tional Men's Pairs Championship held some years ago. Our South player thus found himself in a pure guessing situation. As luck would have it, he guessed right. And, by vir-tue of excellent play, he fulfilled his 11-trick contract.

up with a few goodies. But, as will be observed, his bid turned out beautifully.

West's king of diamonds opening lead was taken by South's ace, after which the outstanding trumps were picked up in two rounds. Then came the lead of South's singleton spade, West taking his ace and returning a spade. On ace and returning a spade. On dummy's king South tossed away his five of diamonds. Now came the 10 of spades, on which South discarded his remaining diamond.

West won this trick with his queen — and at that moment he became the victim of an end play. If he played back another spade, declarer would discard the board's six of clubs as he ruffed the trick in the company hand. It would now bis own hand. It would now become a simple matter to cash the club ace, after which diamonds and clubs would be cross-ruffed.

And if West led a club instead (as he actually did), declarer would play low from dummy and capture the trick with his queen. Thus the loss of a club trick would be avoided.

Declarer played the hand as he did because he was quite certain that West's king of certain that West's Ring of diamonds opening lead had been a singleton. How did he know this? As he put it, if West had held another dia-mond, he would have led it after winning trick four with his ace of spades.

Try Chives Instead of Onions

By JACK BEASTALL

Those who enjoy the flavor of onions but are unable to eat them because of their high sulphur content need not forgo the pleasure if chives are grown in the garden.

The chive is a member of the onion family that does not the onion family that does not make a bulb of an usable size. It is the foliage that is used for its onion flavor.

Cut with scissors and chopped fine, the green leaves can be added to salads, sandwiches, and any dish, hot or cold, which would be improved by the onion flavor.

The chive is a real cut-and-come-again plant, for the foliage that is removed is soon replaced with new young growth.

A small clump is all that is needed for a start. A plant, as purchased from the local herb farm, will contain anywhere from 30 to 50 individual plants. The entire clump can be planted in the garden, or it can be separated and each chive planted individually: They multiply rapidly and form a fair-sized clump within a year. Many gardens alrady have ply of succulent tops every winter.

The best way to divide a large clump now growing in the garden is to cut it in half with a spade, lift one-half and leave the other half undistur-bed for use during the fall. The lifted portion can be divided into bunches containing 15 or 20 plants, and each bunch planted separately, or en window sill where they will be handy during the winter.

For a potting mixture use a little good top soil, some sand, and an equal portion of screened compost to make a Put a small handful of bone-meal for each pot, and mix-together thoroughly.

After potting is completed, bury the pots to the rim in the vegetable garden where they will get both sun and water. For watering, use a slow hose and see that the water goes into each pot.

In mid-fall, around the first of November, the pots should be moved to a protected location, preferably in a cold-frame, or bury the pots again in a sunny sheltered border between shrubs.

A cold greenhouse or a sheltered corner on a highrise balcony are other good spots for storage. While they need some protection from frost, they must not have indoor heat.

When the half-clump that was left in the garden no longer has usuable foliage, one of the pots is brought indoors and placed on a sunny has been removed from this plant, bring in another pot, and place the first one back into storage with the others.

It will be ready to come inside and make more growth in about two month's time. In this way one can provide a steady supply until the outdoor clumps are again growing in spring.

As soon as the outdoor soil is workable in spring, the potted plants can be removed from their pots and planted back in the garden where they will make large clumps

Soviets Blamed

PARIS (Reuter) shipowners claim the Soviet Union is undercutting freight rates at a time when the ship-ping market is already depressed.

The Organization for Economic Co-operation and Dev-elopment, which groups 24 major Western inndustrialized countries, quotes the ship-owners as saying the Soviet Union is offering discounts of up to 35 per cent on some commodities.

ternational economic decline.

The world merchant fleet 1974-75 to a record 339 million tons. But trade declined and lay-ups increased, the report said. Competition for cargo is at its keenest and the report noted that throughout 1975 Western shipowners had "shown increasing concern about the competition posed by the shipping activities of the Soviet Union."

Western shipowners also voiced concern about Soviet ships now on order which might have a major impact on future traffic competition. A record increase took place last year in the fleets under flags of convenience

The queen city, Victoria evokes nostalgia of that graceful era when the omnipresence of Queen Victoria ruled the British Commonwealth. Today, Victoria is a curious blend of the modern and antique. The quaint shops are filled with English toffee and biscuits, china and crystal, woolens and tweeds. Ride along tree clad avenues in horse drawn tally-hos or double-decker bus. Stroll through Bastion Square enjoying its boutiques, art galleries and bistros. Steeped in the fine acoutrements of 19th century living Victoria still is a magnificent reminder of this age of charm and elegance.

Off the shore of the Strait of Juan de Fuca the bluff rises from a sandy beach to a wide sweep of land, the southern slope of Beacon Hill Park. Along the edge windswept trees reach towards the plateau. Before the approaching age of autumn, this beautiful park is carpeted in the colors of daffodils, roses and Scottish heather. Sights are specfacular, but the sweet smell of heather mingled with the bitter salt air is a heady experience. Beacon Hill Park was named as such because in the past bonfires were lit on the northern slope to warn ships of approaching land.

Silently through the pall of the early morning mist, Emily Carr must have walked many times along the pathways of Beacon Hill. Strolling around Goodacres Lake, watching capricious swans and ducks at play. Or watching the crimson orange sun set over the Strait of Juan de Fuca. Perhaps, this incredibly beautiful park was the soul and inspiration which carried her through her wondrous works of art. As it was then, it is the same today. Victorians and visitors alike enjoy Beacon Hill Park, itself, and the breathtaking view it offers of the Olympics by day, the lights of Port Angeles by night.
